

Signalling

With the concentration of the signal boxes the old system will be replaced by an ultramodern electronic system. This means enhanced safety, greater regularity and better information about railroad traffic. The technology used to safely control and monitor train movements is fully computerised.

